1 THE COURT: Next case is numbers
2 06-5008 and 5009, In Re: Lucent Death Benefits
3 ERISA Litigation. And we have Mr. Malone,
4 Ms. Quesada and Mr. Pope.

5 MR. MALONE: Good morning, your Honor,
6 may it please the Court --

7 THE COURT: Hang on. Let's let 8 everybody get together. Just hold on for one sec.

9 Oh, you set a record for the quickness
10 I've ever seen.

11 MR. MALONE: Hopefully we can get out 12 of here just as quickly when our time is up and the 13 next case is called.

14 May it please the Court, my name is 15 James Malone and I speak on behalf of the Foss 16 plaintiffs.

17 Ms. Quesada and I have a request we 18 would like the Court's indulgence on. We would 19 request that we be permitted to divide our rebuttal 20 time so that I would take two minutes and she would 21 take two minutes.

22 THE COURT: That's fine.

23 MR. MALONE: Thank you very much, your 24 Honor.

1 The district court erred in dismissing
2 this action because the allegations that the 3 plaintiffs made and the supporting documents that 4 they submitted demonstrated that the pensioner 5 death benefit at issue here was designed and 6 treated as a defined pension benefit for nearly 40 7 years.

8 It provided retirement income. It was 9 described in the plan language in mandatory
10 language. The plan said, "It shall be paid."

11 The summary plan descriptions issued
12 by AT&T said it will be paid.

13 THE COURT: Now, the plan language
14 said that the plan administrator may grant a 15 pensioner death benefit in its discretion.

16 Now, it did, but it sounds like in its 17 discretion means it also could take it away
18 provided that the person had not, I guess had died.

19 Is that --

20 MR. MALONE: I don't think,
21 respectfully, your Honor, that that's a fair 22 reading of the plan language. This plan had two 23 different kinds of death benefits. There were 24 discretionary beneficiaries, who are not in this

1 case, and there were mandatory beneficiaries.

2 So first it says in its discretion.
3 But then the language continues and it indicates in 4 substance that if there is a mandatory beneficiary 5 or a beneficiary having the following relationship, 6 then the benefit shall be paid as follows. And 7 that's the benefits that we have at issue here.

8 And it's interesting how that fits 9 within the structure of the plan, because when the 10 benefits were discretionary, they paid them wholly 11 outside of the pension trust.

12 When they were paid to a mandatory
13 beneficiary, the issue that's before the court, 14 they were paid from the corpus of the trust.

15 THE COURT: Article 10.1 does say
16 that, "The board of directors or its delegate may 17 from time to time make changes in the plan as set 18 forth in this document, or terminate said plan, but 19 such changes shall not affect the rights of any 20 employee to any benefit to which he or she may have 21 previously become entitled hereunder."

22 But to become entitled to a death
23 benefit you have to die, don't you?

24 MR. MALONE: I don't think so, under

1 this plan. That does not appear to be the intent
2 of this plan. And I think one thing I would ask 3 you to think about is this.

4 THE COURT: And the reason for that 5 would be?

6 MR. MALONE: The termination
7 provisions, your Honor. The termination provisions 8 of this plan set forth and indicated that if the 9 plan terminated death benefits would be paid post 10 termination, not just for those who had already 11 died, which would be what you would assume if the 12 entitlement arose upon death. But also for those 13 who were on the pension roll at the time receiving 14 service pensions, and for those who were still 15 employed who were eligible to retire with service 16 pensions.

17 That to me suggests that the 18 entitlement arose not upon death, but at the time 19 that you rendered the service to the employee, as 20 an employee, which then triggered your eligibility 21 for a service pension and for this related 22 benefit.

23 And there's support for this if you 24 look at some of the language that they use to 1 describe the plan.

2 For example, AT&T in its summary plan
3 description, which is Plaintiffs' Exhibit 16, goes 4 through the criteria, and then it talks about 5 former employees. And it says, "Former employees, 6 even if eligible for deferred vested benefits, are 7 not eligible for sickness death benefits."

8 Similarly, Lucent in its summary plan
9 description says, "If you are a former employee you 10 are not eligible," not your beneficiaries, you are 11 not eligible.

12 The 1985 actuarial report prepared by 13 AT&T's --

14 THE COURT: Just refresh me. Where in 15 the plan or the summary of the plan is there clear 16 vesting language?

17 MR. MALONE: I would submit that the 18 best record on the clear vesting language starts 19 with the termination provision. And the fact that 20 it's tied -- this is a benefit that's joined at the 21 hip with the service pension.

22 If you are not service pension
23 eligible you will not get this benefit post 24 retirement. If you are, you will.

1 THE COURT: But what is the exact
2 language that you're relying on? Not your 3 characterization of it, but what do the words 4 actually say?

5 MR. MALONE: The termination
6 provision, your Honor, says that if the plan
7 terminates then benefits will be paid -- let me 8 find the precise language for you. "To make 9 provision for the payment of death benefits
10 attributable to deaths occurring prior to the date 11 of termination -- you would expect that if death is 12 the qualifying event -- which would have been 13 payable from the pension fund, and for the payment 14 upon the deaths of retired employees who are on the 15 pension roll as of the date of termination, and of 16 employees eligible as of that date for retirement 17 of death benefits which would have been payable 18 from the pension fund had the plan not been so 19 terminated."

20 So that if eligibility is tied to 21 death you would not include those two categories of 22 employees, current employees who are eligible to 23 retire, and retirees who are already drawing 24 service pensions, you would just say with respect

1 to deaths that occurred before the date of 2 termination.

3 And it's interesting to see the 4 conduct over time and how they treated this. For 5 example, the AT&T plan --

6 THE COURT: Mr. Malone, let's take a 7 step back a second, because your time is going to 8 be running out. Let's look at the law.

9 MR. MALONE: Sure.

10 THE COURT: And how do you get around
11 the fact that ERISA, I think fairly clearly, 12 defines a benefit in the event of death, among 13 other things, as a welfare benefit? How do you get 14 around that?

15 MR. MALONE: Well, the definition of a 16 pension plan provides some tension with that, your 17 Honor. The definition of a pension plan says that 18 any plan that provides retirement income, 19 regardless of the method of computing benefits, or 20 the method of distribution, is a pension plan. The 21 IRS has put a gloss on that through regulations 22 saying --

23 THE COURT: Okay, let's just take a 24 look.

1 THE COURT: How does that cover you?

2 THE COURT: Yes. It says, "Pension or 3 pension plan means any plan, fund or program which 4 heretofore hereafter establish or maintained by 5 employer and employee organization or by both to 6 the extent that by its express terms, a result of 7 the circumstances, provides retirement income to 8 employees or results in a deferral of income."

9 MR. MALONE: And then the IRS has put 10 a gloss on that through its regulatory authority 11 which covers not just employees but their 12 beneficiaries.

13 And beyond that --

14 THE COURT: What do you mean the IRS
15 put -- what's the IRS say?

16 MR. MALONE: The IRS promulgated a 17 regulation that said, "A plan designed to provide 18 benefits for employees or their beneficiaries to be 19 paid upon retirement or over a period of years
20 after retirement will be considered a pension plan 21 if the employer contributions under the plan can be 22 determined based on definitely determinable
23 benefits."

24 Now, that was a pre-ERISA regulation,

1 it's Treasury Reg. 1-401-1(b)(1)(i). But it was 2 re-promulgated post-ERISA to apply to ERISA plans.
3 Under 1-401(a)-1(b)(ii) [citation corrected].

4 THE COURT: But you got a statute,
5 just back to Judge Fisher's point and then he can 6 pick up with this. You've got definition of 7 welfare benefit plan or welfare plan includes, 8 among other things, benefits in the event of 9 sickness, accident, disability, death.

10 MR. MALONE: Right.

11 THE COURT: Isn't this like a life
12 insurance policy, a lump sum payable on the event 13 of the death of the person involved?

14 MR. MALONE: Let me address that first 15 and then come to that. Understand that the 16 definition of welfare benefit also excludes 17 pensions payable upon death. That's one of the 18 carve-outs that's built into the definition of 19 welfare benefit under ERISA in Section 3(1).

20 And one of the structural features of 21 this statute when it was passed, one of the reforms
22 that Congress sought to enact, was a requirement 23 that every pension plan pay death benefits to 24 spouses in the form of a joint and survivor

1 annuity.

2 THE COURT: Yes, but there seem to be 3 two different kind of death benefits, one is some 4 residual money that otherwise would go to the 5 employee who's now died, and the other is a lump 6 sum like an insurance policy.

7 My understanding was it's only the 8 latter that is disputed in this lawsuit.

9 MR. MALONE: That is correct, your 10 Honor. I'm just trying to address first the point 11 that is every death benefit a welfare benefit. I 12 don't think that that could be sustained under the 13 statute given the structure.

14 THE COURT: Maybe not when you use 15 death benefit as loose terminology. But when we 16 focus on the lump sum payable upon death, that 17 seems to be totally different than deferred
18 compensation or regular periodic retirement 19 payments.

20 MR. MALONE: It's not always paid as a 21 lump sum. It was eligible for distribution in 22 installments. It was accrued on the 5500s that 23 were filed by the plan, in conjunction with the 24 service pensions to which it was joined.

1 It was directly related to the service
2 pension, which under another IRS reg is an 3 indication that it's not a type of ancillary
4 benefit that a sponsor is free to pull out.

5 In fact, when they broke up the Bell
6 system and transferred assets, the actuaries 7 concluded that funding for this death benefit had 8 to be included in the funding for the transfer 9 under that circumstance.

10 THE COURT: We're not bound by what 11 the actuaries thought or what somebody else said.
12 We're bound by what the plan says and what ERISA 13 said.

14 MR. MALONE: I understand that. But,
15 your Honor, if you look at the overall totality of 16 the circumstances, what you have is you have a 17 sophisticated sponsor that knew a welfare plan when 18 they saw it.

19 When they had welfare benefits like 20 disability benefits, they didn't pay them out of 21 the pension trust fund, they didn't put them on the 22 same 5500 as the pension benefits. They created 23 separate plan numbers for them --

24 THE COURT: You're not arguing that

1 somehow they're estopped by treatment along the way 2 from saying now, as they do, that these were 3 welfare benefits not pension benefits by their very 4 nature.

5 MR. MALONE: We don't raise a claim of 6 estoppel, but I think when somebody, when you look 7 at the question of intent and somebody treats 8 something as a pension benefit for 40 years and 9 then to suddenly say oh, no, it's a welfare
10 benefit, at a minimum I would think that that 11 treatment over 40 years would be relevant to the 12 question of an intent to vest the benefits since 13 pension benefits normally vest.

14 THE COURT: Mr. Malone, how can you
15 distinguish this case from the Second Circuit's 16 decision in Rombach vs. Nestle?

17 MR. MALONE: Rombach involved
18 disability benefits, your Honor. There's no
19 question that disability benefits are a --

20 THE COURT: Well, there was a question
21 in that case.

22 MR. MALONE: Well, that was only
23 because the plaintiff hung his hat on the mere --

24 THE COURT: They treated it as a

1 pension benefit throughout the courts.

2 MR. MALONE: They called it the, they 3 used the buzz word pension.

4 THE COURT: Right.

5 MR. MALONE: And that was really what 6 the --

7 THE COURT: Okay, but the Second
8 Circuit said notwithstanding what they called it, 9 we look at the law.

10 MR. MALONE: That is true. But it was 11 also on a summary judgment, not on a motion to 12 dismiss. It also was involving the type of 13 benefit, for example, that this sponsor clearly 14 recognizes is a welfare benefit because they put it 15 in a welfare benefit plan when they described the 16 benefits in the SPD.

17 They put a 500 label on it instead of 18 an 00 label, as they would for a pension plan, they 19 didn't report disability benefits on their 5500 for 20 the defined benefit plan. So it was -- the 21 disability is such a clear context of a welfare 22 benefit and it's indisputable.

23 Whereas here you have something that 24 was created prior to ERISA, carried forward under

1 ERISA, and which was treated for 40 years by 2 everybody as a defined benefit under this defined 3 benefit pension plan.

4 And the question is did the sponsor
5 have enough freedom to design its plan so that this 6 benefit payable at the time of death, admittedly,
7 out of the corpus of its trust, could be deemed a 8 defined benefit under ERISA. And I think it could.

9 Thank you. You've been patient with 10 me.

11 THE COURT: Thank you.

12 THE COURT: You better pull that mic
13 down more than a tad.

14 MS. QUESADA: I think you're right.

15 THE COURT: Ms. Quesada, let me ask
16 you a procedural question before you get started.

17 MS. QUESADA: Okay.

18 THE COURT: Because I looked at this 19 again this morning. I know there's some dispute 20 whether or not your client should still be in this 21 case and you've asked us to substitute your 22 client. I don't know that we've ruled on the 23 motion to substitute your client.

24 And there's no appeal from the,

1 there's no appeal from the action below where the 2 district court refused to substitute your client.

3 MS. QUESADA: We did appeal. We put 4 it --

5 THE COURT: It's not before us.

6 MS. QUESADA: Yes, it is. It's an 7 issue in our statement --

8 THE COURT: It's an issue in your 9 brief.

10 MS. QUESADA: Right.

11 THE COURT: But, the question, the 12 procedural question I have here is since this case
13 has not yet been certified as a class action, do 14 you have any procedural standing to be here before 15 the fact of certification?

16 I'm not sure it means, other than what 17 you want to say, and I know it's important, but 18 procedurally, I just wonder whether or not your 19 client is here.

20 MS. QUESADA: Well, I think 21 procedurally that if the district court judge had 22 ruled timely on the motion he would have granted it 23 as a matter of routine.

24 So the fact that he says it's moot

1 would seem on some issue, a way of denying a person
2 appeal rights, which would be inappropriate, 3 actually.

4 We did raise this, an issue on appeal,
5 in our appeal. We appealed everything when we 6 filed our notice of appeal. And I think at this 7 point, since the court has already denied the 8 motion to strike the briefs, we're here to argue 9 the merits.

10 And if you affirm, then it remains
11 moot. If you send it back, then the district court 12 can appropriately resolve it.

13 THE COURT: Okay. All right.

14 MS. QUESADA: Let me just jump right 15 into some of the questions that seem to be of 16 interest to the court. And I think the three most 17 important words in this case are the words "defined 18 benefit plan."

19 In the SPDs that were issued in this 20 case they told the participants that this is a 21 defined benefit plan. A defined benefit plan 22 speaks volumes. This is a term of art in this 23 industry. It's called a "DB plan."

24 And a DB plan is the Cadillac of

1 pension plans. It gets the biggest current 2 deductions for a benefit that it pays in the 3 future. And it's subject to 401(a) of the Code,
4 it's subject to Title One of ERISA, which means 5 it's a benefit that has to vest, it has to accrue, 6 it has to meet the minimum funding standards, it 7 has to file a Schedule B, and it has to be 8 actuarially funded and accrued.

9 THE COURT: But part of the question
10 here is has it vested?

11 MS. QUESADA: Yes. Well, it has our 12 position that it has vested --

13 THE COURT: Before termination.

14 MS. QUESADA: -- because if they 15 called it a DB plan, that alone raises an 16 allegation sufficient to not dismiss this case 17 because they called it a DB plan, which has to, by 18 law, vest. And then they put it on the Form 5500
19 in the Schedule B.

20 THE COURT: Educate me here because it
21 has to vest at a particular time. Doesn't it -- I 22 guess maybe the question is when it vests. But 23 they're saying that it doesn't vest until such time 24 as the person dies.

1 MS. QUESADA: Well, that, that's a
2 misreading of even DB plans. Because you could say
3 oh, someone doesn't get their defined benefit
4 service pension until they retire. You could add 5 that same contingency to anything. That's the 6 triggering event for payment. It doesn't tell you 7 whether the benefit, if it's vestable or not. What 8 tells you whether the benefit is vestable or not is 9 the status of the benefit.

10 THE COURT: Isn't part of the point
11 here something that Judge Fisher asked your 12 co-counsel, which is, is this a welfare plan or a 13 pension plan?

14 MS. QUESADA: Well, the thing is --

15 THE COURT: Or benefit I should say.

16 MS. QUESADA: The interesting thing is 17 that determination is not made today. That 18 determination was made 40 years ago. Because 19 employee benefit plans are -- one side is ERISA, 20 the other side is the tax code. And this court has 21 said the actual and intended tax treatment guides 22 in the determination of the plan.

23 Now, if this is a defined benefit plan
24 it had to satisfy minimum funding, it had to file a

1 Schedule B, and it had to select what it was. Was 2 it pension? Was it welfare?

3 Just like you and me, if we're filing
4 a tax return, we have to know if we're filing 5 jointly, we're a corporation, we're a partnership.
6 They had to know that and they had to know it back 7 then.

8 And all the evidence in this case
9 shows that they were treating it as a defined 10 benefit plan to maximize their defined benefit 11 deduction.

12 THE COURT: By treating it as a 13 defined benefit plan, does that mean that they 14 treated this death benefit as a pension --

15 MR. QUESADA: Yes.

16 THE COURT: -- as opposed to a welfare
17 benefit?

18 MS. QUESADA: Absolutely. And the 19 fact that it's on --

20 THE COURT: Because?

21 MS. QUESADA: Because it's on -- 22 because if it's a defined benefit plan by 23 definition it's a pension benefit. But even more 24 than a pension benefit, it's the Cadillac of

1 pension benefits. It has to file a Schedule B, 2 which shows how it's actuarially funded and 3 accrued.

4 And if you look, and we argued that 5 and we showed it in the papers, the Schedule B here 6 has tables showing how the accrual rates for the 7 service pension and the death benefit are together.

8 THE COURT: I'm having trouble
9 following your logic. You seem to be saying that, 10 or implying that a defined pension benefit plan can 11 never have ancillary welfare benefits as well, that 12 it's always excluded, categorically excluded.

13 MS. QUESADA: No. No. I am not 14 saying that. What I am saying --

15 THE COURT: If you're not saying that,
16 then the question becomes, well, why doesn't this 17 plan contain both types of things?

18 MS. QUESADA: It does. In fact they 19 divided it up into three different plans but they 20 put the death benefit payable from pension trust, 21 the service pension, and the deferred vested 22 benefits were all put in the pension plan which was 23 plan 006 and plan 001.

24 They put them all together and then

1 they put those benefits on the 5500. They 2 protected those benefits in the pension plan
3 termination provisions. They even said that this 4 death benefit could be used for rollover and lump 5 sum treatment.

6 Can you imagine AT&T telling all these 7 people that they could have rollover treatment and 8 lump sum benefits from a welfare plan? Welfare
9 benefit plans are not on the Schedule B.

10 The point of the matter is that death
11 is a triggering event for payment under pensions 12 and retirements. So you can't just look at the 13 triggering event to say what the character of the 14 benefit is.

15 This court has said in In Re: IT
16 Group, Inc., that you have to look at the intended 17 and actual tax treatment. And if you study this 18 plan you will see that in every single plan
19 document they are showing that this is a defined 20 benefit plan and that it's ratably accrued. They 21 say it in the SPDs, they show it in the 5500s.
22 What's a welfare benefit doing on a Schedule B?
23 That it should not be on. It should not be given 24 protection before a deferred vested benefit in the 1 pension plan termination provision.

2 THE COURT: Why don't we hear from 3 Mr. Pope and then we'll get you both back on 4 rebuttal.

5 MS. QUESADA: Okay.

6 THE COURT: And then we'll go from 7 there.

8 MR. POPE: May it please the Court, my 9 name is John Houston Pope. I represent all of the 10 appellees.

11 THE COURT: Maybe you can start with 12 the, where Ms. Quesada left off, which is she's 13 saying that this is a defined benefit plan and 14 therefore it must be a pension benefit that's 15 involved here, even if the statute talks about 16 death benefits seemingly, or on a space being under 17 a welfare, being a welfare benefit.

18 MR. POPE: Before even ERISA, your 19 Honor, it was understood that ancillary benefits 20 can be funded out of a pension trust, and that is 21 exactly what has happened here.

22 If you look at the plan itself, it 23 tells you this is a death benefit plan within the 24 pension plan, and that is a separate welfare plan.

1 It has three components to it. It has a sickness
2 death benefit, it has an accident death benefit, it 3 has a pensioner death benefit.

4 The pensioner death benefit is nothing
5 more or less, your Honor, than the sickness death
6 benefit, which there's been no contention that's a 7 pension benefit, nor could there be. It is nothing
8 more than that. Sickness death benefit continued 9 into retirement.

10 As this court said in the Unisys
11 Retiree Medical Benefit Litigation, if all you're 12 taking is a welfare benefit during employment and 13 continuing it into retirement, that doesn't turn it 14 into a pension benefit, that doesn't change its 15 character. It continues to be a welfare benefit.

16 And that is what you have here, a 17 welfare benefit that started in employment and 18 continues into retirement.

19 If it was as you said --

20 THE COURT: How did it start in 21 employment?

22 MR. POPE: It starts in employment as 23 the sickness death benefit, and that is a death 24 benefit that is paid to the survivors of active

1 employees who die during their employment from a
2 sickness-related cause as opposed to an accidental 3 cause.

4 THE COURT: Seems to me that that's a
5 different benefit than a death benefit. A sickness 6 death benefit would be a death benefit that would 7 be paid upon death but it was recognized that the 8 sickness was during employment. There's no
9 sickness here.

10 MR. POPE: It's not -- actually this 11 is, it says in the plan itself, Judge Fisher, that 12 this is the sickness death benefit paid to the 13 survivors of retirees. That's the actual wording 14 of it, of the plan, that the total amount shall not 15 exceed the maximum amount which would have been 16 paid as a sickness death benefit under the terms of 17 Section 5.3 if the pensioner had died on his or her 18 last day of active service before retirement on 19 pension.

20 It's essentially saying we will have a 21 death benefit in retirement that will be the same 22 as a sickness death benefit was before retirement.

23 THE COURT: Okay.

24 THE COURT: What about the tax

1 treatment argument?

2 MR. POPE: The tax treatment argument
3 is an enormous red herring in this case, for a 4 couple reasons. One is it wasn't properly raised 5 below, and for that reason we don't have a proper 6 record on that particular issue.

7 It goes to whether or not the plan
8 would continue to be qualified under the tax code 9 if they had erroneously tax treated this. And that 10 issue wasn't raised below. If it would have, there 11 would have been evidence introduced that the IRS
12 and that the Department of Labor passed on this 13 particular change and found no threat to 14 qualification. That evidence wasn't put in because 15 this argument wasn't raised below.

16 So I think in that respect it should 17 be excluded from your consideration.

18 If you do decide to consider it, the 19 tax treatment doesn't tell you anything more or 20 less than what was being filled out on the tax
21 form. It doesn't change the legal determination 22 that you must make, which is what is the character 23 of this benefit and how does that fit into the 24 code?

1 And we noted for you, for instance,
2 cases from the Seventh Circuit and from other 3 circuits, the fact that you might end up with a tax 4 treatment that looks one way or the other doesn't 5 answer your legal determination for you.

6 This is -- I don't think it even gets 7 to what Ms. Quesada wants to make it out to be, 8 because you have to account for how you deal with 9 the corpus of the trust to the tax authorities 10 regardless.

11 And the tax authorities allow you to 12 use a portion of that for an ancillary benefit.

13 THE COURT: So you say the tax
14 treatment is irrelevant.

15 MR. POPE: It's irrelevant to the 16 determination that you have to make, your Honor.

17 THE COURT: And what drives our 18 determination, as you understand the law?

19 MR. POPE: You have to look at the 20 description of the benefit in the plan documents.
21 The plan documents being the SPD and the plan 22 itself, what is the nature and character of that 23 benefit. Is it the nature and character of that of 24 a welfare benefit or of a pension benefit?

1 THE COURT: And what does that turn
2 on, the fact that it's lump sum?

3 MR. POPE: I believe the fact that 4 it's a lump sum benefit that is paid in the event
5 of death. And that characterizes it as welfare.

6 It doesn't fit any of the definitions
7 of what a pension benefit is. This doesn't defer
8 income. This doesn't pay retirement income.

9 I think it's a bit of sophistry to 10 talk about the fact that there's an administrative 11 convenience in this plan to allow it to be paid out 12 over, up to five years, to call that somehow, it 13 looks like a retirement income.

14 That's nothing more than allowing the 15 benefit to the beneficiaries who would have 16 collected it to get the most favorable tax
17 treatment that they could in accepting the payout 18 of this, because they may have already gotten other 19 large income receipts in the first year or two of 20 death from the estate, and may wish to spread the 21 money out rather than have it all impact in the 22 highest marginal tax rates.

23 THE COURT: Since it's a year of 24 salary, why wouldn't it be a deferral of income?

1 MR. POPE: Because it's not a -- that 2 is just a measure of the amount, Judge Fisher.
3 It's not actually deferring a year of salary from 4 somewhere out in the 30 years of, or 29 or however 5 many years someone works for the company. That's 6 just a measure that was put out there actually in 7 1964 as a convenience for how much would be paid.
8 It's nothing more than that.

9 And it says, it's the greater of $500
10 or a year of salary. I submit to you in 1964 there 11 were more than a few people who came out better 12 than $500.

13 In 19 -- people who retired in 1985,
14 such as plaintiffs, came out better in the one year 15 of salary.

16 THE COURT: Are there any cases in 17 which a defined benefit plan had within it, as you 18 say this one does, a separate section for 19 distinctly different type of benefit that fits the 20 definition of a welfare benefit?

21 MR. POPE: I think both Rombach and 22 Robinson in the Second Circuit, when they have a 23 distinctly different benefit, which is the 24 disability pension, what they call the disability

1 pension, is within the pension plan itself being 2 funded out of trust monies and it is even described 3 erroneously within it as being a pension benefit.
4 And the courts agreed you have to make the legal 5 determination to find that it's a welfare benefit.

6 THE COURT: On the vesting issue, why
7 isn't this case controlled by New Valley?

8 MR. POPE: Well, New Valley doesn't 9 provide for you the rules on how to interpret an 10 ERISA plan, your Honor, an ERISA plan that's within 11 the regular standards.

12 It is a top hat one. And this court 13 has said that top hat plans are interpreted by 14 different rules. We look to more of an integration
15 and a closed area within standard ERISA plans.
16 This "shall be paid" language that goes on, that is 17 the touchstone that the plaintiffs want to go with, 18 has to be read within the entire plan as a whole, 19 which includes the reservation of rights clause.
20 It even has to be read within its own context, 21 which I think doesn't tell you that it "shall be 22 paid" in all instances. It tells you it "shall be 23 paid" in accordance with the following.

24 Grammatically it's telling you that

1 when the benefit is paid you have to follow one of 2 these two rules.

3 So I would go again up to what we 4 pointed out to you, which is in the first clause of 5 the pensioner death benefit section which says the 6 committee may, in its discretion, authorize a death
7 benefit.

8 The "shall be paid" doesn't tell you
9 anything more than it's going to be paid in accordance 10 with the rule if it's going to be paid it has to be 11 one of these two rules depending on when you 12 retire.

13 THE COURT: Mr. Malone made the point
14 that his clients are what he would refer to as 15 mandatory beneficiaries. Do you accept that 16 distinction?

17 MR. POPE: His clients aren't 18 mandatory beneficiaries. He has one client who 19 would have been a mandatory beneficiary under the 20 old system. The rest of his clients are actually 21 the people who are going to have to die before a 22 benefit is paid, so they're not a beneficiary.
23 They're the triggering event, as Ms. Quesada tells 24 you.

1 It doesn't make a difference to the 2 interpretation in this instance, your Honor.

3 THE COURT: It seems to me, Mr. Pope,
4 that if you're a -- AT&T, if you were an AT&T
5 employee, if you were a Lucent employee and you 6 looked at your pension plan and you examined all of 7 the documentation in the plan, if you had looked at 8 the summary plan, if you had access to the IRS 9 forms that were filed, that you would conclude that 10 you're receiving a certain amount during your 11 lifetime and at your death your spouse or other 12 eligible beneficiary was going to get this death
13 benefit.

14 I mean there's nothing in there, other 15 than -- there's nothing that I would see in looking 16 at that plan that draws into question at all your 17 eligibility for that death benefit. And if you're 18 planning for your estate you're going to think, 19 well, this is one less lump sum I'm going to have 20 to cover to protect my family in life insurance.

21 Why shouldn't this be treated as a 22 defined benefit that you yourselves clearly 23 defined? Why shouldn't it be?

24 MR. POPE: Your Honor, it's a welfare

1 benefit. You have to make that legal 2 determination.

3 THE COURT: What tells us it's a
4 welfare benefit?

5 MR. POPE: We know it's a welfare
6 benefit because it's a lump sum paid upon death.

7 THE COURT: Because of ERISA?

8 MR. POPE: Because of ERISA. That 9 said, when you characterize it within pension --

10 THE COURT: Let me stop you there.
11 When Congress enacted ERISA, who were they looking 12 out for?

13 MR. POPE: They were balancing the 14 interests of retirees that they wanted to protect 15 and the companies who were offering benefits.

16 THE COURT: Weren't they looking to 17 protect the retirees and weren't they looking to 18 protect the plans that were established by the 19 companies?

20 MR. POPE: That was one of the 21 important considerations that they were looking at, 22 yes, your Honor. And they were also looking to 23 balance the rules. This is what the Supreme Court 24 tells us.

1 They were looking to balance the rules
2 so that companies would continue to have incentives 3 to offer benefits.

4 THE COURT: But it seems to me that 5 you're boot strapping your argument to support your 6 plan based on language, based on a law that wasn't 7 necessarily intended to benefit you, the employer.

8 MR. POPE: Well, your Honor, it's not 9 a benefit to the employer to be able to end the 10 benefit. We're not being benefitted. It's not 11 like somebody took the money out of this plan and 12 put it in Lucent's pocket.

13 THE COURT: Well, it's money that you
14 don't have to pay.

15 MR. POPE: It was money that they 16 didn't have to pay at a time at which perhaps that 17 contribution could have pushed them into bankruptcy
18 and put other benefits into jeopardy, your Honor --

19 THE COURT: Might not be a pocket but 20 it certainly sounds to me like an account.

21 MR. POPE: It's not an account, your 22 Honor. There is a question on an ongoing basis as 23 to whether or not you have to make contributions to 24 a plan and whether or not that challenges the

1 financial viability of a company, which could 2 challenge ultimately other retiree benefits.

3 And so there are decisions being made 4 that balance a number of factors, your Honor. But 5 the fact is that Congress, when they implemented
6 ERISA, at least this is what the Supreme Court
7 tells us, because we know it's a carefully drafted 8 and reticulated statute that we are all supposed to 9 be afraid to mess with.

10 But what we've been told was that 11 Congress was balancing the fact that it wanted to 12 protect retirees and it wanted to protect employees 13 against the company's need to have flexibility that 14 was sufficient to provide incentives to maintain 15 some level of benefits.

16 They didn't want companies to go out
17 the day after ERISA was passed and start 18 terminating plans as quickly as they could because 19 they didn't want to face the future of being locked 20 into some benefits that would become 21 extraordinarily expensive and that they couldn't 22 deal with.

23 So we know that piece of it, and there 24 is a balancing that goes on.

1 So I guess I don't want you to feel
2 that we're trying to exploit ERISA. There's no
3 exploitation of ERISA involved here. There is a 4 welfare benefit. And while there may be some 5 subjective expectations that you describe that you
6 believe the retirees would have, those subjective 7 expectations don't control whether or not it's a 8 welfare or pension benefit.

9 It has to be a legal determination,
10 your Honor. It has to be looking at what the 11 statute provides for as to how we define what's a 12 pension and what's a welfare benefit.

13 This is a welfare benefit with a 14 reservation of rights clause.

15 THE COURT: You seem to be saying that 16 the two categories are entirely mutually exclusive, 17 that a benefit is either a pension benefit or it's 18 a welfare benefit. And one way you know it's a 19 welfare benefit is if it doesn't look like a 20 pension benefit. If it's not deferred income, it's 21 not a monthly pension check, it doesn't have any 22 earmark of a pension, right?

23 MR. POPE: That is one of the ways, 24 yes.

1 THE COURT: Can a death benefit ever
2 be a pension benefit?

3 MR. POPE: It can be if it is as -- I
4 think it was Judge Michel described that you can 5 have one that is, I think your term was very good, 6 it's the residual that the employee otherwise would 7 receive. When a death benefit pays out that 8 residual, it is a pension benefit.

9 THE COURT: How's it set up in this 10 particular plan then?

11 MR. POPE: In this particular plan
12 it's not paying out a residual of what an employee 13 would have otherwise received.

14 This particular death benefit we are 15 talking about is like a life insurance policy that 16 happens to be paid from a corporate, from a pension 17 trust, but it's like a life insurance benefit, it's 18 a lump sum.

19 THE COURT: Does the SPD somehow give 20 the impression, however, that when you retire this 21 vests?

22 MR. POPE: No. There's nothing that 23 says one way or the other what happens. It doesn't 24 say when this retire this vests for your life.

1 You have to understand, your Honor,
2 the notion of vesting is language that says
3 essentially we're not going to take this away.
4 It's not simply language that describes the 5 benefit. That's a benefit description language.

6 And benefit description language
7 doesn't vest. That's not the clear and express 8 language we look for for vesting.

9 The clear and express language we look 10 for is saying that this is a benefit we're not 11 going to change.

12 THE COURT: What if we were to hold 13 that the language here is ambiguous, what would be 14 the remedy?

15 MR. POPE: The remedy for ambiguity?
16 Well, your Honor, I don't think the language is 17 ambiguous.

18 THE COURT: I understand. You're not 19 conceding that. I'll give you that.

20 MR. POPE: I don't think that there is 21 a sufficient question of fact to get you past the 22 summary judgment that's already entered, even if 23 there's an ambiguity.

24 The reservation of rights clause

1 resolves the ambiguity against the plaintiffs
2 because it places within Lucent's hands the right
3 to make the changes.

4 THE COURT: Did they grant a motion
5 to, did the court grant a motion to dismiss or did 6 the court grant summary judgment? I know you
7 slipped that word, summary judgment, in your last 8 response there.

9 MR. POPE: Because it is both, your 10 Honor. It was originally made as a motion for 11 summary judgment at a time at which the plaintiffs 12 were asking to substitute in a consolidated Amended 13 Complaint adding this claim under Section 420 of 14 the Internal Revenue Code.

15 So the arrangement that was agreed in 16 allowing them to put in the amended complaint, I 17 say agreed in the sense that this is what the judge 18 decided to do, not what we agreed to do, because we 19 didn't want the new complaint.

20 What the procedural posture that was 21 followed was is that the consolidated amended 22 complaint would be filed and we would move as a 23 combination of a 12(b)(6) and a summary judgment
24 motion bringing forward the summary judgment

1 arguments with regard to all the claims that 2 previously had been asserted and on which discovery
3 had been conducted and summary judgment had already 4 begun, and it would be a motion to dismiss as to 5 this new claim on Section 420, which was really 6 just a legal argument.

7 So the judge is granting a motion to 8 dismiss and a motion for summary judgment. Based 9 on the reading of his opinion, he looked at the 10 summary judgment materials, so I think we have to 11 read it as a Rule 56 motion.

12 THE COURT: But he said the 13 defendant's motion to dismiss is granted.

14 MR. POPE: I understand that, your 15 Honor. I think we have to read it a little bit 16 more practically. He was looking at the materials
17 that were in, and even if you just read it 18 literally, I think that we would look at it from 19 the point of view both sides put in all of their 20 proofs, it would be a 12(b)(6) motion converted to 21 summary judgment by consent and practice.

22 THE COURT: It does make a difference
23 from our review, does it not?

24 MR. POPE: Well, ultimately it

1 doesn't -- it's not going to make a difference in 2 this case, your Honor. It can make a difference.

3 But since a legal question is our most 4 important one with regard to pension versus welfare
5 benefits is a de novo review anyway, summary
6 judgment is de novo review anyway. The only 7 question is would you look at materials outside the 8 four corners of the complaint. Since both sides 9 put in all their proofs and essentially consented 10 to that being done because they understood that the 11 notice for motion included Rule 56, it's not going 12 to make a difference to your Honors as to what your 13 scope of review is because you get to look at that 14 entire record and decide whether or not the judge 15 below was correct, as we would contend, in granting 16 the motion.

17 THE COURT: Thank you very much,
18 Mr. Pope.

19 Mr. Malone.

20 MR. MALONE: Let me start by talking
21 about New Valley very quickly. New Valley is a top 22 hat case, that's true. That only affects the scope 23 of what the court can look at. In other words, 24 outside of the top hat context the statute provides

1 a strong integration clause.

2 The language that we're citing in New 3 Valley when we talk about mandatory language, when 4 we talk about a benefit that's tied to another 5 retirement benefit as indicia of vesting, is based 6 on a construction of the operative plan document in 7 this case.

8 So the fact that it was a top hat plan 9 I don't think has any bearing on that aspect of New 10 Valley's applicability here.

11 The subject came up of who was the 12 statute passed for. Congress told us who they 13 passed this statute for. They passed it --

14 THE COURT: Yes, Senator Long made
15 that pretty clear.

16 MR. MALONE: Retirees and also 17 beneficiaries, which somehow got lost in the 18 discussion earlier.

19 And I think that's important, because 20 that's what we're talking about. We're talking 21 about a deferral of income to be paid to 22 beneficiaries of retirees from the corpus of the 23 plan.

24 Now, there's one nuance here that we

1 haven't talked about, which is the real structure
2 of this benefit. For most people it was going to 3 be a year's salary. But there was a minimum set 4 forth in the plan. And the minimum was a very 5 interesting one.

6 It's the annual amount of the pension
7 allowance that you would receive as a service
8 pension. So there is a direct relationship. As I 9 said earlier, these two benefits are joined at the 10 hip.

11 To qualify to get this benefit you had 12 to meet the age and service requirements. It's a 13 post-retirement benefit that only those who met the 14 age and service requirements for a service pension 15 would receive.

16 And there's an IRS reg that's covered 17 in some of the death benefit cases that we've 18 talked about where benefits are directly related 19 to.

20 Comes up in the cash balance context.
21 Most cash balance plans will provide that, although 22 it's a defined benefit plan, if the employee dies, 23 they can designate that their account balance or 24 its actuarial equivalent can be distributed, often

1 in a lump sum.

2 So again, there's a category of 3 benefit payable on death that has historically been 4 treated by every court that's looked at it as a 5 pension benefit and not a welfare benefit.

6 Thank you very much, your Honor.

7 THE COURT: Thank you very much.

8 Thank you.

9 Ms. Quesada.

10 MS. QUESADA: Just quickly on the 11 procedural matter. It's our position that the 12 judge did Rule 12(b)6. He only referenced the 13 allegations of the complaint and the documents that 14 were in there. And he does have a reference to 15 that on page 19 of his opinion.

16 We had very limited discovery in this 17 case, your Honor. We got document discovery. No
18 depositions of the actuaries or company officials
19 who filed these Schedule Bs and these tax returns.

20 THE COURT: That's not part of the 21 appeal, right? There's no challenge to the limits 22 on discovery that's been presented to us.

23 MS. QUESADA: Well, we were faced with 24 a summary judgment motion and we responded, your

1 Honor. We only got the discovery that we had at 2 the time that the motion was made.

3 THE COURT: What's the answer to my 4 question of whether your appeal includes the 5 challenge to the ruling that limited your 6 discovery?

7 MS. QUESADA: We didn't make that 8 application, your Honor. About what the benefit is 9 that we're appealing, there were two types of 10 benefits, death benefits paid from operating and 11 death benefits paid from the pension trust.

12 And if you look in the provisions that 13 we're relying upon, the summary plan description, 14 is very clear, that death benefits paid from the 15 pension trust were treated as defined benefit 16 plans.

17 Death benefits paid from the pension
18 trust were treated on the 5500s as pension and they 19 were on the Schedule B. Welfare benefits are not 20 on Schedule Bs. They're not subject to 412.

21 THE COURT: What about Mr. Pope's 22 argument that it doesn't make any difference how 23 you treat it, it's what the statute says?

24 MS. QUESADA: Well, the interesting

1 thing, the statute says, ERISA, 3002(c) defers to 2 the tax code on certain treasury regulations. They 3 are 410, 411 and 412. 411 is vesting and accrual;
4 412 is funding.

5 And if you look at the definition of 6 funding under the 411 regs, it basically says 7 accrued benefit is an accrued benefit under the 8 plan.

9 So if the Treasury provisions trump
10 ERISA, and it suggests to me that it does, under 11 that provision, if Treasury is permitting this 12 benefit to be accrued as a pension benefit, and 13 there's every indication that they did, then that 14 should in fact prevail.

15 There is clearly more creativity under 16 the Code than there is in ERISA, as far as the tax 17 deductions and the treatment of these plans.

18 And I think our brief shows that you 19 are permitted to fund a small death benefit that is 20 directly related, sort of like a little mini-me, 21 that attaches to your pension benefit to maximize 22 your pension deduction.

23 AT&T with the best lawyers, they did a 24 beautiful job. Everywhere you see the three

1 benefits they called to be defined benefits: death
2 benefits paid from the pension trust, service
3 benefits and deferred vested benefits, got the same
4 treatment throughout the documents, same treatment 5 in the 5500, same treatment in the pension plan and 6 the pension plan termination provisions.

7 Those were the three that were 8 rewarded first, and they put the death benefits 9 paid from the pension trust in the middle.

10 If it was a welfare benefit, what's it
11 doing there? It's not supposed to be there. It
12 shouldn't be on the Schedule B if it's a welfare
13 benefit. And it certainly shouldn't get lump sum 14 and rollover treatment.

15 THE COURT: Thank you very much. I
16 want to thank all counsel for very, very well 17 presented briefs and oral argument.
